Thirty-Third Sunday in Ordinary Time - Year A

14 & 15 November 2026

The Catholic Communities of Our Lady Help of Christians, Eltham & St Francis Xavier, Montmorency

We acknowledge the Wurundjeri people of the Kulin Nation who are the traditional custodians of this land and pay our respect to the elders past, present and emerging.

Next Saturday, 21st November, we welcome Fr Terry Kean to our 6pm Mass at St Francis Xavier, Montmorency and extend an open invitation to all to join us in celebrating his 80th birthday at Mass and for a light dinner/supper in the Parish House after Mass. All welcome.

Please bring a plate of food and a bottle of drink to share.

Reflection:
Break Open the Word 2026

There would need to be a good reason to use the shorter truncated parable in today's Mass. Enjoy the repetition and allow the message to sink in.

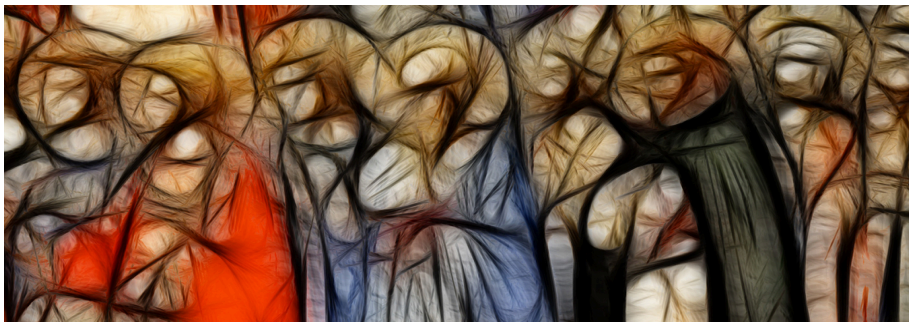

First of all, it is worth clarifying what a 'talent' is. It is not a personal gift or aptitude though the close association of 'talents' with 'abilities' in the story has led to this interpretation. A talent is a unit of weight, apparently about 25 or 30kg, of what the parable does not say; suddenly though, with the third servant, it becomes 'money'. The parable is about how each servant handles the five, or two, or one units entrusted to him.

The master returns 'after a long time', perhaps a reference to the settling of accounts at the last judgement. The first two who have been bold and enterprising with what they have been given - doubling the number of units - are praised and welcomed to master's happiness. 'Faithful' means they can be trusted to do what is best. The third who has been so fearful and risk-averse that he has done nothing at all is called wicked and lazy and is cast into darkness.

How do we live the message of Christ entrusted to us? As we read next week, this parable is followed immediately by the story of Christ's judgement with the separation of the sheep and goats. 'Come inherit the kingdom prepared for you ... I was hungry and you gave me food ...' This provides a key to understanding what we are to do with the Good News handed on to us. At the end of Matthew's gospel, Jesus commands the disciples: Go therefore and make disciples of all nations ... (28:19). Is this the bold mission which the parable of the talents imagines?

Gospel: Matthew 25:14-30

Jesus spoke this parable to his disciples: 'The kingdom of heaven is like a man on his way abroad who summoned his servants and entrusted his property to them. To one he gave five talents, to another two, to a third one; each in proportion to his ability. Then he set out. The man who had received the five talents promptly went and traded with them and made five more. The man who had received two made two more in the same way. But the man who had received one went off and dug a hole in the ground and hid his master's money. Now a long time after, the master of those servants came back and went through his accounts with them. The man who had received the five talents came forward bringing five more. "Sir", he said, "you entrusted me with five talents; here are five more that I have made." His master said to him, "Well done, good and faithful servant; you have shown you can be faithful in small things, I will trust you with greater; come and join in your master's happiness." Next the man with the two talents came forward. "Sir," he said "you entrusted me with two talents; here are two more that I have made." His master said to him, "Well done, good and faithful servant; you have shown you can be faithful in small things, I will trust you with greater; come and join in your master's happiness." Last came forward the man who had the one talent. "Sir," said he "I had heard you were a hard man, reaping where you have not sown and gathering where you have not scattered; so I was afraid, and I went off and hid your talent in the ground. Here it is; it was yours, you have it back." But his master answered him, "You wicked and lazy servant! So you knew that I reap where I have not sown and gather where I have not scattered? Well then, you should have deposited my money with the bankers, and on my return I would have recovered my capital with interest. So now, take the talent from him and give it to the man who has the five talents. For to everyone who has will be given more, and he will have more than enough; but from the man who has not, even what he has will be taken away. As for this good-for-nothing servant, throw him out into the dark, where there will be weeping and grinding of teeth."'

This parish has a commitment to ensuring the safety of children and vulnerable people in our community.

We support the recommendations of the Royal Commission into institutional abuse and pray for all the survivors.

'Open wide the doors...'

The burgeoning number of visitors attracted to the Basilica of St Peter in Rome is creating challenges as well as opportunities for the Vatican / by Joanna Moorhead

It's 6:30pm in St Peter's Square, and though it's raining and dark and almost closing time, there's a long queue to get into the basilica still snaking across the piazza. Behind me, a woman with a southern American accent is consulting her guidebook. "Says here it's the biggest church on the planet," she says. The colonnade lights go on, and a "wow" ripples down the line. "That's quite a sight," says another voice, from another continent, the awe obvious in his voice.

St Peter's Basilica, which celebrates the 400th anniversary of its dedication this month, is the Catholic Church's melting pot. The queue symbolises its reach, with people of all ages and heritages, from all corners of the Earth and all social and economic backgrounds, waiting in this one line to get into this one basilica that bears the name of the apostle Christ chose to lead his first followers. There are women and men, old and young, people and priests, people of faith and people of none. There are nuns, bishops, church leaders: Bob Prevost and Jorge Mario Bergoglio both probably stood in this queue years before they waved down from the basilica's balcony after being elected pope.

After half an hour or so's wait, and the airport-style security checks, we're inside the vast church itself. Although I've always loved early mornings in St Peter's, I have to admit that an autumn evening feels a very special time to be here. The nave is filled with transparent chairs, and the bright lights glint off them, matching the grey of the walls. Grey and gold, brown and silver: these are the pre-dominant colours, weaving their drama across hundreds of years of history.

ALAMY, NICO VIVAS

'Prayerfulness and gaiety': inside St Peter's, which attracts visitors of all ages and heritages

The atmosphere is a mixture of prayerfulness and gaiety, celebration and solemnity; this is a place for art buffs and storytellers, worshippers and historians. A group of youngsters is trying to find their neighbourhood in the mosaics on the floor, a bit like the Hollywood Walk of Fame: "Sydneyensis"; "Westmonasteriensis", "Angelorvm in California". Others are lighting candles, saying prayers; you can pray at the tombs of popes and saints, get a blessing here, organise a Mass, go to Mass, go to Confession. You can admire the art; you can learn about the history. You can make a donation (to charity as well as to the church); you can go shopping. As you leave, you can post a card with a Vatican stamp. You can even have a cappuccino in the snack bar on the roof.

The day after he returns from his 12-day visit to Uruguay, Argentina and Peru, Pope Leo will preside over a solemn Mass at St Peter's to mark the exact anniversary, 400 years to the day, since Pope Urban VIII consecrated the basilica. That date was 18 November 1626: it was chosen because it was the anniversary of the consecration in 326 of the original St Peter's Basilica, built on the site of the Circus of Nero where St Peter had been crucified, and the ancient necropolis where he was buried. "We're certain of the date because it's recorded in many books," Professor Pietro Zander, head of the Necropolis and Artistic Heritage Section of the Fabric of St Peter in the Vatican, tells me.

He's the oracle when it comes to the history of this most extraordinary of churches: he's been here for more than 30 years, and his father before him was an architect who worked on the building. There's not much Zander doesn't know about this place and its history: and one important thing to know, he says, is when the present St Peter's was consecrated 400 years ago, it looked very different from the way it does now. "Urban consecrated a church that was unfinished: there was no piazza in front, no marble, no pillars, no Bernini sculptures. At that time it would have looked very plain: the reason it was consecrated at that time was to do with the date, and the link to the original basilica," he explains.

The basilica's most famous element was its dome, designed by Michelangelo in 1547. However, this spectacular feature, rising 437ft into the air and with an internal diameter of 136ft, was finished only in 1593, 29 years after Michelangelo's death in 1564.

In 1626 Bernini had just begun working on his 95-feet-tall bronze baldachin, which was not completed until 1634; and the sculptor's colonnade outside on the piazza would not be finished for a further 40 years.

That link to the consecration of the first basilica is at the heart of this year's celebrations too. And while the culmination of the 2026 anniversary will be the pontifical Mass on 18 November, there have been plenty of other events across the last 12 months, including a Bernini exhibition in Rome's Palazzo Barberini, and an exhibition of tapestries created to mark the 1626 consecration at the Vatican Museums. A series of innovations have been introduced to mark the anniversary, including an AI-assisted translation accessible by smartphone for visitors attending services in languages other than their own, and the opening up of previously inaccessible areas of the basilica, including its terrace (which is where the cafe is located). A new font has been commissioned to mark the occasion: not the kind in which babies are baptised, but the kind in which you're reading this article. Named "Michelangelus", and inspired by the eponymous artist's own handwriting, it's now available from Microsoft.

While the anniversary has been an opportunity to improve the visitor experience, that ambition is laced with a level of anxiety about the ways in which not only the number but the attitude of those visitors has changed. Last year's Jubilee Year, the death of Pope Francis and the election of Leo pushed visitor figures up dramatically: there were more than 1.3 million visitors to the basilica in January 2025 alone. "Numbers have been exceptional in the past year," says Zander. "Some days we've had more than 100,000 people through the doors - that's around 7,000 an hour. The average over the year has been around 50,000 a day." It's around five times as many visitors as 20 years ago, he says.

The death of John Paul II in 2005 began a huge increase in visitor numbers, Zander tells me. He links the recent burgeoning number of visitors to "the huge growth in global tourism", especially the vast increase in the number of tourists from China. Is he concerned by what this all means in terms of its impact on the wear and tear of the basilica? Of course, he says - but there's a bigger issue. "From the point of view of conservation, we're worried because the footfall is so great now. But even more serious is not so much the preservation of the stones as the presence of sacredness. Because when the basilica is so crowded, it's hard to make people realise they're in a sacred space."

In the past, he points out most of those who visited St Peter's were "pilgrims", and believing Catholics. Today, things are very different. "Catholics who visit know they're in church. Men remove their hats and so on. But how do we make others understand the meaning of the place they've entered? That is the challenge for us." He stresses that the Vatican is delighted to be welcoming so many more visitors - but making them more aware of the spirituality and teachings of the Church and their place in the basilica has been at the root of many of the changes for the anniversary year. And there's no doubt Zander knows they're up against it. His advice is to visit before 9:30am or after 5:30pm, when there are fewer visitors and you're likely to get more of a sense that is one of the most sacred places in the religious world.

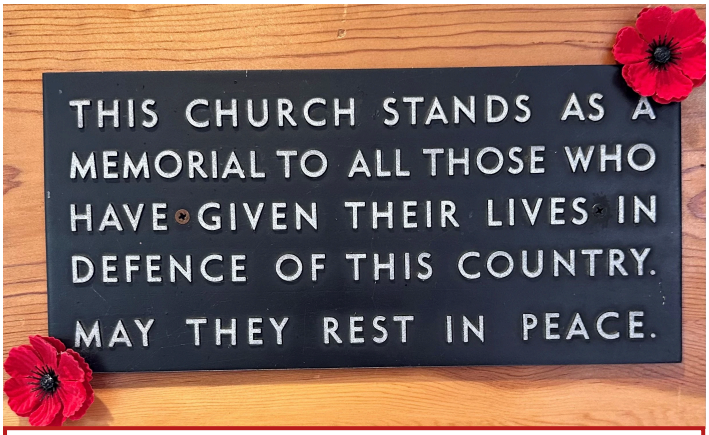

As for 18 November, he says his team has researched what happened 400 years earlier, and the service will reflect that day. The original consecration featured a monumental procession into and around St Peter's, and the Pope blessed the exterior of the basilica with holy water before taking possession of the basilica for himself and his successors. "We're still working on what exactly is going to happen for the Mass next month," he says.

This is Rome, where they do things the same way they always have. Expect a lot of pomp, a lot of prelates, a lot of processing - and plenty of acknowledgement of the place this sacred space has had in the hearts of so many, from so far away as well as so near, across so many centuries - and will continue to have for centuries to come.

Prayers of the Faithful for 15th Nov
33rd Sunday in Ordinary Time

Leader: With the confidence of a child we turn towards the Father. We pray for the Church, for humanity and for all the people in distress.

Praise to you, God our Father, for our priests, our deacons and all those baptised who have received the gift of your Word. May we be inspired to announce the bold promises in the Gospels to the four corners of the world.
Let us pray to the Lord. Lord, hear our prayer.

Praise to you, God our Father, for our leaders who act with wisdom for the Common Good. May all our leaders act for the welfare - spiritual, social and economic, of all people.
Let us pray to the Lord. Lord, hear our prayer.

Praise to you, God our Father, for those who have the talent to listen and show compassion. Sustain them in their mission to help the sick, those in prison and the lonely.
Let us pray to the Lord. Lord, hear our prayer.

Praise to you, God our Father, for this congregation, called to be witnesses of the Kingdom. Grant to us the ability to enrich each other, using all our talents to bring about a better Church.
Let us pray to the Lord. Lord, hear our prayer.

Praise to you, God our Father, for the comfort and help you give to those who are sick, especially through the ministrations of those who nurse or visit them.
Let us pray to the Lord. Lord, hear our prayer.

Praise to you, God our Father, for granting peace to those who have died recently, especially xxx and to those whose anniversaries occur at this time, including Cliff Bredle, Neil Patrick Donahoo, Michael Love, Joseph McCudden, Gwen Radcliffe, Marie Warden and Damian Williams. May we remember them in our prayers, especially during this month of November.
Let us pray to the Lord. Lord, hear our prayer.

Leader: God our Father, you who call us to grow your Kingdom here on earth, we stand before you. Deign to listen to our prayers and grant them through Christ our Lord.

All: Amen

A bumper crop: ordinations this weekend

Encountering God on the road

Travel broadens the mind, the saying goes, but it can also broaden the spirit and deepen our trust in a God who encounters us on the road in surprising and gracious ways.

That was certainly the recent experience of Ajesh Abraham and his family. Having made a pilgrimage to Rome for the Jubilee of Hope in 2025, they set out again last month for the Eternal City to celebrate Jesus Youth's 40th jubilee - a journey, he writes, that unfolded as a gift.
https://melbournecatholic.org/news/a-melbourne-familys-pilgrimage-of-grace-to-rome-for-jesus-youths-40th-jubilee

As we get ready for the ordination of two new priests and seven new deacons on Saturday - a bumper crop of vocations! - we speak with the four men preparing to enter the permanent diaconate and the two deacons to be ordained to the priesthood about the roads they have travelled and their hopes for the journey ahead.

And recently, Pope Leo XIV embarked on the longest apostolic journey of his papacy so far, bringing a message of encouragement to Uruguay, South America's most secular country, and drawing record crowds in Argentina, before his 'homecoming' to Peru in coming days. As he set out last week, only 24 days after his successful surgery for lung cancer, he entrusted himself to our prayers, 'that this trip may strengthen faith, renew hope, rekindle the fire of charity, and serve as an impetus to continue proclaiming the Gospel with joy'.

CASH CASH CASH

Yes, as they say, 'cash is king'.

From this weekend until all sold, our St Vincent de Paul members at Montmorency will be selling packs of Christmas Cards, handmade Christmas decorations & Christmas tree ornaments for very reasonable prices (mostly $5 or some at $10) before & after Masses at Montmorency.

So, bring along your cash as we have no credit card machine.

Many thanks to Lorraine Gioules for once again making such high quality items for sale to benefit those in need in our local community.

Save the Date!

On Sunday 6 December we will be holding an Advent coffee catch up at the SFX Monty after the 8:30am Mass. We would love for as many Parishioners as possible to hang around and enjoy meeting others in our wonderful community.

We are in need of one more coffee machine to borrow on the day and the owner willing to make coffees. (Under the supervision of Lenny!)

We are also planning on providing Christmas treats for all to enjoy. We would appreciate any offers to bring a plate of your favourite Christmas treat to share. For catering purposes, please let us know if you plan to contribute.
